

GITHUB CREATION REFELECTION

As a beginner in the world of GitHub, exploring and experimenting with new things can be truly challenging, especially in programming. Even simple numbers and basic words can become confusing. These simple terms often carry many meanings, which can easily lead to countless errors. This makes the learning process overwhelming at times, but it also pushes me to think deeper and become more careful.

Throughout the activity, I experienced both frustration and excitement as I discovered how GitHub works. It may be difficult, but I know this will soon become part of our everyday life. I can already feel the hardships, yet I am determined to finish what needs to be done. This will be a long journey, and I hope I can enjoy every step of it before I completely lose my mind.